Moderator

Opening presentations

Europe has world-class research, strong regulatory frameworks, and a deep open-source tradition. Yet Europe has repeatedly watched others capture the economic value from technologies it helped invent.

What would have to be structurally different for open agentic AI to break that pattern?

Panel discussion

If each of you could change one thing, one policy, one institutional behaviour, one industry norm, that would materially improve Europe's position in agentic AI over the next five years, what would it be?
